Aihara Fumio was a participant in the prewar Japanese Left who worked as a professional translator and editor. In the postwar era he and his wife, activist Furuya Yoshiko, remained active in social movements and became supporters of the New Left during the 1960s and 1970s. After their deaths, family members gave their books and personal papers to Takazawa Kōji, who subsequently arranged to have them included as a named sub-collection in the Takazawa Collection. The Aihara-Furuya materials contain a number of very early prewar Japanese translations of books by European Marxists that were translated by Aihara Fumio. Some correspondence between Aihara and these authors, such as Gyorgy Lukacs, is also in the collection, along with some German and English originals of books and serials that Aihara owned.

Furuya Yoshiko was active in the Beheiiren anti-Vietnam war citizens' movement in the late 1960s, in the women's movement, and in many other social movements. The collection includes her Beheiiren materials and clipping files on protest events, as well as copies of articles she wrote on the women's movement and other subjects. Personal papers in this sub-collection were unsealed in the year 2000 but have not yet been catalogued.

Korean-Japanese Word Booklet

This is a Korean-Japanese word book or rudimentary dictionary used by Furuya Yoshiko. It is treated as an artifact rather than a regular book because of its size and condition.
Materials from Other Donors

This box contains household record books from the Furuya household. There are also memos and related artifacts from the Furuya household records.

This box contains two furoshiki or wrapping cloths in which some of the materials from the Aihara-Furuya subcollection were wrapped when the Takazawa Collection received them. These cloths were routinely used for wrapping and carrying items until the 1980s, when paper shopping bags became the more stylish alternative. However, many older women still use the handy furoshiki. We have left these in the collection because they may become rarer cultural artifacts in the future. These are not particularly traditional examples—one is actually a French designer cloth—but they were apparently in regular use by Furuya Yoshiko.

This box contains address and telephone number books, business cards, etc. that belonged to the Furuya family.

This box contains various notebooks of Furuya Yoshiko.

This box contains several cloth items from the Shinjuku Beheiren organization, including two sizes of yellow flags used as banners during demonstrations, a red headband (hachimaki) and a white headband (hachimaki), which were worn by demonstrators.

This is a set of tickets to a Shinjuku Beheiren event, from Furuya Yoshiko’s materials.
This is a booklet on conversational Korean put out by the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (North Korea) and obtained by Furuya Yoshiko during a trip to North Korea.

This is a set of 102 letters sent by Tomimura Jun’ichi to various people. Tomimura was a militant Okinawan activist who created an incident at Tokyo Tower for which he was arrested and tried in Tokyo. Most of the letters were written from prison, in which case each page contains the purple censor’s mark. Furuya Yoshiko was a central figure in Tomimura’s support organization and helped edit his writings for publication. These letters were in her papers. Many of these letters have already been published by the support organization.

Most of the materials are correspondence between Aihara Fumio, who was a professional translator, and the authors and publishers abroad with whom he worked. The original correspondence is material he received, including a letter from Gyorgy Lukacs who was answering a query about a translation. The box also includes the original drafts of the letters that Aihara Fumio composed in German to be sent to his correspondents, so that in many cases both sides of the correspondence can be reconstructed. Much of it concerns mundane matters of permissions and payments from publishers. The letters date from 1952 to 1960.

This set contains 418 postcards sent to Aihara Fumio (Furuya Chiari’s pen name) between 1957 and 1988.

United Shobo was a bookstore in Kanda that carried a lot of left materials, including ephemeral materials published by New Left groups, and also published some materials. The store was searched in September 1974 and 150 copies of a bomb manual carrying an unrelated innocuous title were confiscated and the owner, Endō Tadao, was charged with violation of Article 4 of the Explosives Control Law. Some manuscripts related to the case were found in Furuya Yoshiko’s materials. The “jikokuhyo” listed in these materials is not a timetable, but the name of a small serial that Unita Shobo published. The serial is in the collection as Serial ID#32.
Through much of the 1970s and 1980s there was a long-running conflict over the construction of Narita International Airport in the Chiba village of Sanrizuka. The New Left became heavily involved in the conflict and many participants were arrested. There are many materials in the Furuya Yoshiko subcollection from the appeal trial in the early 1980s, presumably because Furuya Yoshiko was involved in the support group. Since they are manuscripts, they are included here rather than in the Court Documents section.
